THE ORIGIN OF LABOR DAY

FIRST CELEBRATION IN NEW YORK CITY ON SEPT. 5, 1882.

It Rapidly Grew Into a National Affair-Girl Stopped a Strike-Local and General News.

Labor day, the workingman's holiday, set apart in nearly every State in the Union by legislation, is perhaps the most universally observed, although it may not be celebrated, of any other legal holiday. With few exceptions the first Monday in September is observed as Labor day and so designated by law. The earlier celebrations of Labor day were marked by the closing of all factories and suspension of industrial work, now business houses and public offices are closed and all commercial, industrial and even professional life takes one day's rest. Many who observe Labor day may not take part in the celebration and on that day all business is more generally suspended than any other day in the year.

The first celebration of Labor day took place in New York city Sept. 5, 1882. The Knights of Labor were then secretly working in New York and many of the local assemblies were affiliated with the Central Labor Union. When the first General Assembly of the Knights of Labor began on Sept. 5, 1882, the Central Labor Union was invited to witness the parade from the grand stand at Union Square, A recess was taken and the Central Labor Union watched the Knights of Labor parade. That was the first Labor-day parade. While the parade was passing Robert Price, of Lonaconing, Md., turned to Richard Griffiths, the general worthy foreman of the Knights of Labor, and said: "This is labor day in earnest, Uncle Dick." The event was afterward alluded to as the "Labor-day parade," and subsequently the day became known as Labor day.

on the first Monday in September, 1885, and when a parade was being discussed in Central Labor Union in 1884 George K. Lloyd offered a resolution declaring the first Monday in September Labor day. The resolution was adopted. In other States the Labor day movement was being agitated, and after the naming of the day bills were presented in several Legislatures to designate it as a legal holiday for laboring men. New York was the first State to receive a legislative bill. It was presented Jan. 4, 1887, but was not signed by the Governor till May 6, 1887. In the meantime a bill was introduced in the Oregon Legislature Jan. 17 of the same year and received the signature of the Governor Feb. 21, which was the first to declare Labor day a legal holiday. Similar legislative enactments were approved in New Jersey, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Colorado in the same year, and then followed a consecutive and rapid adoption of like laws in the various other States. The bill in Indiana was passed March 9, 1891. The first general observation of Labor day was Sept. 7, 1891, and since then the celebrations have become more generally observed throughout the country.

For a time many of the States chose different days as Labor day. In California It was fixed on the first Monday in October, in Louisiana Nov. 25. Wisconsin left it optional with the Governor to fix and some selected other dates. Gradually the first Monday in September has become the recognized Labor day, and is so fixed by the executives of States where it is not designated by law, as the laboring men's legal holiday.

Labor day was originally intended for an educational day, when, after the parade, laboring men should assemble and listen to discussions of economic and industrial subjects. This manner of celebrating the day was in vogue for a time, but now the day has become one of festivities, amusement and recreation.

"Daisy" Settled the Strike. This is a labor story which is going the rounds of the labor press: "Five hundred men and their families are to-day praying for the happiness of 'Daisy,' the daughter of Dr. John A. Mead, who they have just learned won their strike for them at the Howe Scale Company in Rutland, Vt., by refusing to marry until her imbibing freely of liquor began war on father, the owner of the works, gave in to their demands.

"The strike, which began last May, was for a nine-hour day with ten hours' pay. Dr. Mead wouldn't listen to the demands, and so, until the other day, the works remained shut down. "Miss Mary Sherman Mead, whom the workers had called 'Daisy' from her babyhood, had vainly pleaded with her father, and at last, when the day of her marriage to Carl Bingham Hinsman approached, she " 'I shall never marry until this strike is settled. I can never be happy while so many families are starving.' "Rather than sacrifice his daughter's happiness, Dr. Mead yielded. But it was not until Tuesday that the beautiful and plucky girl's share in the settlement of the strike became generally known."

The carpenters' unions had fewer men idle last week than for two months. The Tailors' Union will carry in the Labor day parade a banner bearing the names of all the "fair" firms in the city. The Foundrymen's Helpers' Union will hold an open meeting in its hall, Hillside avenue and Tenth street, Friday night. The Bridge and Structural Iron Workers have all the work in the city coming under their jurisdiction on the fair list and all members are employed.

"I desire to express my sincere regret at the arrest of Mr. Daggett. It resulted solely on account of a misunderstanding as to the time of payment of the obligation owing from him. On the afternoon of July 29, last year, Mr. Daggett lost $56 of my money while watching the diving horses at Fairview Park. He immediately wrote me about the loss and sent me a negotiable note to cover the amount, which I accepted. "When I was in to see him a week ago he asked nie to wait a month longer on him to enable him to pay this note, as he had another obligation that he would attend to if would wait. It was here that the misunderstanding resulted. When my attorney called on Mr. Daggett, the day before the arrest, Mr. Daggett did not have the money to meet the payment, and requested a little time to get it for me. As my attorney did not leave his name and address, Mr. Daggett could not accommodate me, as he intended to do.'

McPeak Gang in Court.

Patrolmen Gillispie and Crist and Sergeant Boylan yesterday morning arrested Dave McPeake and Patrick Collins for engazing in a saloon fight Friday night. The men were with "Red" Finley and several other well-known characters, and after every one they met. It is said they severely beat W. H. Davis, residing at 524 West Georgia street, about 1 o'clock yesturday morning. The men hid in an alley and lay in wait for Davis as he was on his way home. The cases were called in Police Court yesterday morning, but were postponed until Wednesday in order to give the police an opportunity to catch the remainder of the crowd.

Last week was the dullest week in the real estate market this year. There were but 102 deeds recorded, representing an agpose of establishing an information bureau | gregate consideration of $143,790.42. The month of August has been the dullest month in the year, the aggregate, $675,270.91, falling far below that of any other month The textile workers of France, Germany, in 1902. There was also a falling off last week in mortgages and releases. There were but eighty mortgages recorded, representing $71,142.60, and fifty-one releases, repinternational defense fund and to vote only resenting $53,818.93.

The vacation season is assigned as the reason for the dull market. Investors and a consequence there have been fewer inquiries, less soliciting and fewer sales. Real estate men last week received a number of inquiries for acreage near the city for gardens. This was the only feature of the week. With the 1st of September it is expected the market will take on new life and business will pick up. The architects report considerable buildjoying a good business. Six weeks ago they established a camp on Fall creek, southeast of the fair grounds, where they have since lived in tents, going to and from their office on the street cars. Others joined them and in all there were fifteen tents in the camp. Ten acres of the Johnson farm were leased and fenced in so that it gave the privacy of home. The tents were floored and encased in mosquito netting, so that everything was pleasant. A well was also driven to supply the campers with water. Some members of the party had two or three tents and enterhave now left the camp with the exception of Hiram Plummer and his wife, who will remain till Wednesday. They have been in their home in the city but three times since established again next summer, a little earlier than this year.
